Everyday Good Things

A GLASS of orange juice before breakfast and as many glasses during the day as one can enjoy and is able to provide, will keep the system in health, sweeten the blood and keep the alimentary canal in active order.

When adding orange juice to various dishes it is best uncooked, though if not cooked at a high temperature or too long the flavor and food value will not be destroyed.

Orange Queen Pudding.—Three tablespoonfuls of butter, one-half teaspoonful of grated orange rind, three-fourths of a cupful of sugar, the yolks of two eggs, one-fourth cupful of orange juice; cook over boiling water until thick. Cool and add one tablespoonful of lemon juice. Spread six slices of bread with butter, then cover with the custard mixture and lay in a baking dish. Beat the whites of two eggs with two whole eggs, add three-fourths of a cupful of milk, juice and one-half cupful of milk, a pinch of salt, pour over the bread and set the pan in hot water. Bake in a slow oven until the custard is set. Serve hot or cold.

Fish Omelet.—Flake a cupful of any cooked fish and add to it a cupful of medium white sauce. Chop fine one onion, one-half a green pepper, a stalk or two of celery or the white leaves; put two tablespoonfuls of butter in an omelet pan. Beat the yolks and whites of four eggs separately, add one-eighth teaspoonful of salt and one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper to the yolks; pour all into the omelet pan. Brown lightly on the bottom, then set into a hot oven to dry off. Pour half the fish mixture over the omelet, then fold and pour over the remainder. Serve hot.
